Salesman's Manual and Planter's Guide, 1927 Jan 17 2020

Excerpt from Salesman's Manual and Planter's Guide, 1927: Hardy Northern Grown Fruit Trees, Evergreens, Shrubs, Shade Trees, Roses and Vines, Perennials Generally speaking, all deciduous trees and plants (those that shed their leaves in the winter) should have the tops trimmed back about one - half of the last season's growth before planting. We know that the average planter hates to cut from six to twenty-four inches off from the top of a five-to six-foot fruit or shade tree when 'he transplants it. Thousands of trees are lost every year because this is not done. A tree that has been so trimmed will, in two year's time, outstrip in size and height an untrimmed tree. We some times feel that we should require our cus tomers to so trim their trees or forfeit the replace guarantee. Impress the necessity of this trimming upon your customers. Trees and plants are like humans, having only a limited amount of vitality, and we can help them to retain this vitality by lessening the amount of top which the roots have to support until they have established themselves. All broken or badly damaged roots should be removed and the tips of all heavy roots should be cut back at least a half inch just before transplanting. Planter's Manual (Classic Reprint) Dec 20 2022 Excerpt from Planter's Manual From now' on, there will be no question about us being able to furnish the best that skill and money can produce - nursery stock true to name, each tree and shrub labeled so there can be no substitution - and to serve, in every case, in a manner that will give a full measure of satisfaction to all who deal with us. For some time back, we have been able to say that no tree, shrub or plant has left this place that was not as near the state of perfection as is humanly possible to make it, and it will be our policy to steadfastly follow that course in the future. The Tree Planter and Plant Propagator May 13 2022 Excerpt from The Tree Planter and Plant Propagator: Being a Practical Manual on the Propagation of Fruit Trees The propagation of plants is a most useful and interesting art; and although in most cases it certainly requires care, patience, and perseverance, yet there is a pleasure connected therewith that is quite original in its nature, and those who are masters of the art of propagation are as far in advance of the ordinary course of gardening as an inventor of a piece of machinery is before the man who merely makes the machine according to a given plan. The practical theory for the propagation of plants is scattered over the whole of the literature of gardening; so that if you want to find how to multiply a certain plant you may possess, probably you may have to buy or borrow some book, hard to come at, possessing the required information, before you dare venture to cut your plant for propagation, lest you should lose both the cuttings and the original, which is frequently the case. This has at times cost the loss of a man's professional reputation, and frequently his place too. It is true some books profess to embody the art of propagation of most plants, the information in which may be sufficient in detail for the experienced professional, while conveying mere hints not sufficiently definite for the novice. Here, then, I find good ground for the present attempt to produce a book which in itself shall meet the demand without further reference, trouble, or expense. The Sugar-Planter's Manual Nov 19 2022 Excerpt from The Sugar-Planter's Manual: Being a Treatise on the Art of Obtaining Sugar From the Sugar-Cane We have the strongest evidences to show, that many plantations which formerly were productive of large revenues to the owners, have not during the last few years paid the expenses necessary to keep them in cultivation; and instead of represent ing the large capital invested in their formation or purchase, have become altogether worthless and unsaleable. The Fores Tree Planter's Manual (Classic Reprint) Jul 15 2022 Excerpt from The Fores Tree Planter's Manual Dear 'sir: -the legislative act Of 1893, basing support for the State For estry Association, requires an annual report of its doings, together with such other information as it may deem necessary to further advance the interests of forestry. The Minnesota Board of World's Fair Commissioners liberally provided for an exhibit of our woods at the Columbian Exposition of 1893, in Chicago, Ill., and allowed the Association the honor of Official representation. The exhibit ranked with the first class, and awarded accordingly. Great interest was manifested in our woods by citizens Of other states and nationalities, and earnest inquiries made as to their extensiveness for commercial uses. Soon after the close of the exposition, the commissioners tendered the en tire exhibit to the Forestry Association, as state property in trust, and re-erected it in the Main Building on the State Fair Grounds, preserving its original form greatly improved. Cacao Planters Manual (Classic Reprint) Aug 16 2022 Excerpt from Cacao Planters Manual Among the agricultural products which have of late years made rapid strides on the domain of industry and manufacture, the cacao, generally called and written cocoa), the chief ingredient of chocolate, holds a distinguished place. This article is becoming more and more general as a popular beverage and wholesome food, and thus notwithstanding the increasing production, the consumption holds the balance sufficiently to prevent any serious decline in price. There is surely no agricultural production that requires more rare, trouble, patience, perseverance and outlay, than the cacao, but against this it may be stated that, in ease of success, no product can be mentioned that yields greater profits, while these will go on increasing prodigiously from year to year.
