Many articles have not been referred to, either for the reason that they have contributed nothing to the progress of our department, or else as more generally the case, being well written statements of the accepted opinions on given subjects written for the general practitioner were not suitable for abstracting. Again, some articles by able workers touch on so many points and are of such importance that abstracting is not possible, all such are, however, mentioned under the proper heading so that those interested may readily refer to them.
